Tweet source labels

Tweet source labels help you better understand how a Tweet was posted. This additional information provides context about the Tweet and its author. If you don't recognize the source, you may want to learn more to determine how much you trust the content.

1. Click on a Tweet to go to the Tweet details page.
2. At the bottom of the Tweet, you'll see the label for the source of the account's Tweet. For example, "Twitter for iPhone," "Twitter for Android," or "Twitter for Web."
3. In some cases you may see a third-party client name, which indicates the Tweet came from a non-Twitter application. Authors sometimes use third-party client applications to manage their Tweets, manage marketing campaigns, measure advertising performance, provide customer support, and to target certain groups of people to advertise to. Tweets and campaigns can be directly created by humans or, in some circumstances, automated by an application. Visit our partners page for a list of common third-party sources (<https://help.twitter.com/https://partners.twitter.com/en/find-a-partner.html>).
